

The Archaeological Institute of America
Western Illinois Society and the Department of Classics

present

Prostitution Ancient and Modern: A Tell-All Confession

Nicholas Rauh
Professor of Classics
Purdue University

In this presentation, Rauh discusses the available archaeological evidence for venues of prostitution in ancient trading ports such as Delos and the limitations of modern scholarly modes of analysis for investigating these. He combines this material with personal observations obtained from his own experiences in Turkish police stations and tourist hotels in Antalya and Alanya Turkey. Ultimately, the presentation questions whether or not standard scholarly methods are adequate to the task of analyzing cultural behavior as commonplace, yet, as subterranean as ancient prostitution.

Wednesday, October 17, 2018

7:30 pm

Pattee Auditorium

Center for Science and Business 100

Monmouth College